It is a matter of immense pleasure that UP Council of Agricultural Research in collaboration with Institute of Agriculture Science and Technology, Integral University, Lucknow is organizing an International Congress on "Post-Harvest Technologies of Agricultural Produce for Sustainable Food and Nutritional Security". At the outset I wish a grand success for this Congress.

I hope the Congress will discuss at threadbare various issues pertaining to post harvest treatment as it largely determines the final quality of the agriculture produce. The potential for post harvest losses of grains, vegetables and fruits are the subjects which need the special attention of Congress so that the strategies of loss assessment methods and the attempts to be made for the loss reduction could be finalized. Vegetables and Fruits are subject to the active process of senescence and therefore their "Shelf Life" vis-à-vis overall appearance, taste, flavour and texture of Commodity shall also be important components of strategies to be finalized
